MONDAY, JANUARY 1, 1872.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Gold closed on Saturday at 99 1/2.
 —The New York cotton market closed firm; uplands 20 cents; sales 9833 bales.
 —In Liverpool there was no cotton market in consequence of the holidays.
 —By the death of Hackett, the American State loses its only representative of Falstaff, and the English stage has no actor really capable of filling the part.
 —Messrs. Grant and Creswell have taken one step backward in their scheme of a government telegraph, or rather their friends in the Senate have done this for them, agreeing to report the Hubbard bill, which provides for the hiring instead of the purchase of existing lines.
 —The latest rumors of fraud are connected with the recent sale of fire-arms and munitions of war to the French. It is now asserted that the returns to the war department are about $4,000,000 less than the cash receipts from the agents of France. Other revelations of frauds are promised.

—In Strasbourg committees have been organized to raise subscriptions to help to pay the indemnity which France owes to Germany. The Alsatians are now within the boundaries of Germany. This act is a sad and touching proof of their yearning for the people of the nation to which they recently belonged. It is one of the most remarkable of recent events.
 —Russia may mean peace; but if so, why issue the imperial ukase just published, which fixes the military contingent to be raised by conscription in 1872 at six for every thousand males? The peace contingent has hitherto ranged from two to four per thousand. The levy now proclaimed will be equivalent to the raising of from 130,000 to 140,000 recruits, between the ages of eighteen and forty.

—The desperate illness and the remarkable recovery of the Prince of Wales seem likely to furnish a new chapter in medical as well as political history. The treatment of typhoid in old times was by depletion; in more recent times it has been by alcoholic stimulation. In the present case this was discarded, and tonic given instead. It is quite possible that the success of the new treatment may give rise to researches which will end in the discovery of alcoholic stimulants in cases of disease where the exhaustion is so pronounced as in this.

—The late Jacob Barker, whose death, in Philadelphia, has recently been announced, was one of the most remarkable men of his time. It is stated that at the age of twenty-one, in New York, he was owner of four ships and a brig, and stood high in business. He started penniless. Another instance of extraordinary success at an early age is that of Mr. Newcomer, of Baltimore. Before he had attained his majority he had secured control of the Baltimore flour market. His career in life has been remarkable. Although not an old man, he is one of the most wealthy and influential men in Baltimore.

—The cumulative system of voting is recommended in the new charter proposed for the City of New York by the committee of seventy, to be adopted in the election of forty-five aldermen—nine from each of the present State senatorial districts. The voter in any of these districts can cumulate his votes on any one candidate, or divide them between two or three, or as many other candidates as he pleases, so long as he casts but nine votes. Under this plan a minority of Republicans can concentrate their votes on one or two Republican candidates, and elect them, or even three or four where the Democratic majority is not very large. In the same way Democrats can secure representation in a Republican district.

—The revival of the plan for adopting the British system of one cent postal cards has already produced a number of inventions which aim to combine the small size of the card in use in England with a means of concealing the writing, and thus obviating the objection urged against the system on the ground of the publicity given to correspondence. The English postal card is about four inches long and three broad, the letter being written on one side and the address upon the other. The system, it is claimed, has been a marked success peculiarly, having added largely to the postal revenues of Great Britain; but much trouble has been occasioned by the cards being used as means of libel, and by injury having been done, sometimes purposefully and sometimes innocently, by senders of the cards to the character and business of recipients. American inventors now promise to take away this objection, so that there shall be nothing to urge against the cards, their success as a financial experiment having already been proved in England.

—The Rev. Robert Jefferson Breckinridge, D. D., LL.D., died last Wednesday at Danville, Kentucky, after a long illness. He was born at Cabell's Dale, Kentucky, March 8, 1809.

After studying successively at Princeton, Yale and Union Colleges, he took his degree in 1831. He then entered upon the profession of the law, but subsequently became a clergyman in the Presbyterian Church. In 1832 he was ordained pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Baltimore, where he remained for thirteen years. In 1845 he was elected president of Jefferson College, Pennsylvania, but after two years accepted the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church in Lexington, Kentucky, and became superintendent of public instruction for the State. In 1853 he was elected professor of theology in the then recently established seminary at Danville, Kentucky. Dr. Breckinridge was active in most of the religious, moral and philanthropic movements of his time, and in the discussions incident to the division in the Presbyterian Church was eminently conservative and temperate. He was the founder of the common-school system of Kentucky. He edited several religious publications, and wrote a book of travels, besides a great number of tracts and essays. In the slavery discussion he advised moderation on both sides, but when the civil war broke out stood by the Union cause.

—The monotony of metropolitan managerial life was varied last week by the arrival at New York of several distinguished visitors from Cincinnati, who were warmly welcomed by Messrs. Morrissey, Heenan and others, and escorted to the St. Nicholas with much pomp, price and circumstance. The visitors all carried large black valises distended with greenbacks, and their avowed mission was to "break" the gambling establishments of the city, or, perchance, in the attempt. To this end, having refreshed themselves and brushed down their accoutrements the dust of travel, they repaired to the lairs of the "tiger." At the expiration of the first session, the Western speculators returned to their hotel with somewhat shrunken valises. The next night they tried fortune again, with no better success, and at the end of the third night all their riches had taken wings and imitated the aerial convolutions of the dove. The ledgers of the gentlemanly proprietors of the studios show that the amount of $42,850 was transferred to their account by their equally gentlemanly visitors, who, with barely money enough to pay the fare, and with very badly warped black valises, are now returning to Cincinnati, doubtless sadder, though possibly not wiser men.

The New Year.

We are all in the habit of looking back; looking back upon merrier days when, "in the morn and liquid dew of youth," the world seemed filled with joyous promise; looking back to the times when the blood sparkled merrily in the throbbing veins, and hearts beat high with confidence and hope; looking back to the broadness and laces which have sadly given place to the well-worn homespun; looking back, in the misery of defeat, to what time we drank the new wine of victory; looking back, from the plain, to the glittering heights where the travel-stained wayfarer began the journey of life; looking back from sorrow to gladness, from happiness to grief, from poverty to wealth, from sumptuous fare to the toil of winning daily bread. We all look back, and happy are they who find, in the past, a worthy lesson, and a good omen for the days to come. They who have done much may realize that they should have done more. They who have accomplished nothing may waken to the knowledge that one other should not be added to the roll of wasted years. And the peoples who have known tribulation may see, as in a mirror, some of their faults, as they turn their faces, steadily and resolutely, towards the labors of the future. What was left undone teaches what should be done, and what is done should teach what more remains to do.

For South Carolina the year now ended has been one of mingled loss and gain. The work of the husbandman has been fruitful beyond expectation. While other States have suffered from unpropitious seasons, the crops of South Carolina have been unusually abundant. A heavy yield of cotton, made at a low cost, has been safely housed, and sells at a price which amply compensates the farmer for his toil. The sea islands, for the first time since the war, have escaped the caterpillar and the drought, and, as a whole, have had a highly lucrative year. On the other side, we know that far more than the people have gained, by the sweat of their brow, has been stolen from them by public robbers. The State debt, which a year ago was about $7,000,000, is now not less than $15,000,000, and may be $30,000,000. Every effort of the intelligent citizens to control legislation, in the interests of economy and decency, has failed. The Governor of the State, arraigned by his own party, has, for the moment, escaped punishment. And to the losses by official theft are added the rigors, without the benefits, of military rule. The suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in the upper counties of the State paralyzed their industries, and has seriously retarded their progress. Too many young men, disgusted and disheartened, have abandoned their homes, to begin life anew in the distant West.

All this is blue enough. Aye! black and blue; but there is a more cheerful side to the gloomy picture. The solid gain of the State, agricultural and commercial; the thriftier habits of the people; their persistent and plucky wrestling with grinding care—these cannot be stolen by the Ring in one year or ten. The fraudulent public debt will never be paid. All that the Ring can extort is an exorbitant tax during the few months that they remain in power. Their crimes break them down. Before long, they will be driven forth, with the brand upon their forehead, condemned alike by Republican and Democrat, by white man and negro. It is as certain as anything in this State can be, that the Legislature and the public officers to be elected this fall will be better men than those who, these four years, have lorded it over the State. There is no dogged obstinacy to stand in the way of reform. The conservatives are ready to march side by side with their old opponents to achieve the triumph of intelligence and honesty over ignorance and vice. Nor can the reign of terror in the up-country long endure. That section of the State is full of vigorous life. As soon as the heel of the soldier is removed, the upper counties will again move forward. And when the civil law is rigidly and impartially enforced, neither white nor black shall want that full protection and security without which no community can flourish. The refugees will be glad enough, ere long, to come back home. It will be the story of Mexico and Brazil over again. The frugality and the perseverance which are demanded of them if they would succeed abroad, will, as thousands have learned, make them even more successful among their kindfolk in their native State.

Charleston has had both the crown and the cross. The efforts of her people to purify the Municipal Government have been unexpectedly successful. This city has a vigilant and a progressive administration, instead of one in which the leaders were knaves, fanatics or fools. There is new life in the streets and on the wharves. The railroads, of which Charleston is the terminal point, stretch out their mighty arms farther and farther towards the West and South. Even the pestilence, which for months made Charleston a city of desolation, has not seriously injured commerce or trade. There is every cause for encouragement and no reason for despondency. Charleston is moving onward. Her business is larger year by year, and next New Year's day who ever may, in these columns, review the history of 1872, will tell a glad tale of difficulties overcome and dangers past—of activity, advancement and content.

Let us put behind us all of the dreary past, that is gloomy and dispiriting—pick the wheat from the chaff, and never look back; except when we would make light of coming peril by remembering that greater troubles were met and overcome. This State is hard to kill. All the rogues and rascals in Heathenese cannot destroy her beyond hope of resurrection. It may seem that she is in extremis. The chucking crew may declare that the great heart beats faintly, and the rattle is in her beauteous throat. But as sure as her sons are steadfast and true; steadfast in working, and true and loyal in spirit; their mother, South Carolina, will rise again—pointing with pride to the honorable scars of ill-deserved affliction, and wearing, in honor, the diadem which they only can win who have borne the brunt of battle, and who, from among the thorns of anguish and suffering, have plucked the blushing rose of prosperity and peace.

The Land Commission Swindle.
 We print to-day a second instalment of the revelations of the Radical Joint Investigating Committee concerning the Land Commission Swindle. The committee show that the expenditures are largely in excess of the appropriations; that the whole affair was "an outrageous and enormous" fraud; that Land Commissioner Leslie was paid $50,000 to resign; and that the State has not, valid titles to one-half the lands purchased by the Commission at from twice to ten times their value. Well may the people applaud the statement of the committee that legal proceedings should begin at once to bring "these fraudulent transactions to light, and the corrupt complicators to judgment." The whole history, however, is not yet done. There is more to come.

WE LEARN from the Columbia Phoenix that Charleston, Georgetown, Chester and Fairfield are the only counties, so far, which have contributed the full amounts asked of them, for the vindication of the supremacy of the civil law in the Ku-Klux trials. The first two counties gave more than was required—Charleston having contributed fifty per cent. more than her quota. It is hoped that the remaining counties will forward their assessments without delay.

Hostetter's Bitters.
WARNING WORDS.—The strength and nervous energy of the human body ought to be increased during the winter, for two reasons: In the first place, diseases of the most deadly character may be generated at this season; and secondly, it is of the utmost importance that during the cold weather months the system should be put in a condition to withstand the effects of the spring miasma, and the subsequent depressing heat of summer. It is therefore advisable, in fact essential to tone, regulate and invigorate the digestive and secretory organs at this period of the year, and of all the stomachics and alteratives at present known, HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS is the most powerful, the most harmless, and the most agreeable. The temperature of winter would be in itself a glorious tonic, if it did not, unfortunately, bring with it a volume of chilling moisture and unwholesome winds, which have a bad effect on the skin and lungs. These must be guarded against, or there is no security for health. The effect of a course of the Bitters is to give vigor and tone to the entire organization—the superficial muscles and nerves, as well as the internal viscera. A regular habit of body, a healthy and natural bow of bile, an active digestion, a good appetite, pure blood and a vigorous circulation of that fluid, are among the blessings derivable from a persistent use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which not only more than supplies the place of the best tonics, cathartics and antiseptics prescribed in their separate forms by physicians, but perform the three-fold work of invigoration, regulation and purification, at one and the same time. jan1-mw13ac
